World's Master Writers Contribute to the Greatest War Symposium

In Next Sunday's Sun

The following well known men, whose written opinions are always looked for by thinkers and seekers after information, have spent weeks of concentrated thought on various angles of the dreadful drama now going on in Europe, and their articles concerning the war in NEXT SUNDAY'S SUN form a collection the equal of which has not been published since the outbreak of hostilities.

LEONID ANDREYEV'S NEW GREAT WAR DRAMA

KING, LAW AND LIBERTY

The Tragedy of Belgium By LEONID ANDREYEV

Author of "Red Laughter," "The Seven Who Were Hanged," etc. (Translated from the original by Herman Bernstein, Editor of THE DAY.)

Leonid Andreyev, Russia's foremost writer and one of the most interesting figures in European literature. has written a drama in which he depicts the tragedy of Belgium. The hero of the drama is a famous author in whom Maurice Maeterlinck is recognized, and the King of Belgium is portrayed in a striking manner.

Leonid Andreyev, whose war story entitled "Red Laughter" created a sensation during the Russian-Japanese war, has now produced another masterpiece of the war horror. The fourth act, regarded by the author as the most important, will be given in Herman Bernstein's version in Next SUNDAY'S SUN.

Nikola Tesla-

Makes a forecast as to the duration of the struggle, discusses Germany's attempt to conquer the world and gives you a mental treat in the manner in which he sums up the situation.

G. K. Chesterton-

"This is a war to free the world" is what the brilliant writer believes and says the Prussian is resolved to destroy democracy. He makes some remarkable statements in a remarkable interview.

Sidney Whitman-

This friend and biographer of Bismarck and authority on international affairs talks of the blight of Prussian autocracy and gives the reader many open secrets concerning the Kaiser.

Yves Guyot-

In an article, "The Waste of the War and the Trade of To-morrow," endeavors to forecast the cost of the conflict and the effect on commerce after peace is established. He presents some remarkable figures.

R. M. Johnston-

Examines Napoleon's tactics and strategy and compares his conceptions of the science of war with those of other famous generals and with modern military theories in a gripping article called "What Could Napoleon Accomplish To-day?"

Archibald Hurd-

Whether the submarines have rendered the battleships useless is the great question raised by the war, and in "The Submarine in War; Its Menace," this English authority on naval matters presents the facts developed thus far, together with his conclusions.

Marie Van Vorst-

Writes from Paris the details of the wonders the American women who remained in the French capital are working in the care of the wounded soldiers. It is a story with a strong appeal to all mothers, sisters and wives.
